How do I get more members to show up?

Pre-event engagement:

- Engage members by writing event comments
- Send personal messages (e.g. to first timers)
- Send emails with relevant information prior to the Meetup event

Set the tone

Make sure your intentions and expectations for the Meetup event are clearly communicated, so members know exactly what they're walking into.

- Agenda
- What should people bring?
- Is there a special meeting place?
- Make members aware of potential roadblocks beforehand
- Be open to questions

Consistency

Create regularly scheduled Meetup events to create a routine for members while having a variety of activities to make sure they are appealing to the different types of members you may have

A suggested monthly agenda could be:

- One social night out
- Three events hosted during a week day
- One event hosted during the weekend

Create a great in-real-life (IRL) experience

This is key! Members will keep coming back if they have a good time, form positive connections, and get value out of the event.

- Let your personality shine!
- Greet everyone especially if they're new
- Identify your champions: make your invested members feel special by giving them small responsibilities like greeting new members or checking people in
- Take pictures

Post-event engagement

Keep the conversation going after the event

- Upload photos
- Ask for feedback/suggestions from the attendees
- Thank attendees in the event comments
- Encourage people to RSVP to the next one
- Personally reach out to those who didn't show up

How do I find good speakers?

- Ask your group members. They can be your best resource!
- Create an introductory path for members to speaking at events
- Look at what other similar Meetup groups in your area are doing
- If distance/travel is a barrier, use a video conference tool to bridge the gap

Why have a leadership team?

- Distribute the workload: Additional leaders allows you to delegate organizing responsibilities.
- Encourage collaboration: Having more leaders empowers them to learn leadership skills and builds trust in your community.
- Reward members: Assigning leadership roles is a great way to let a member know you love their passion and ideas.
- Ensure continuity of the group: Having a larger leadership team will ensure that your group continues in the event where you can no longer fulfill your leadership duties.

Who should be on my leadership team?

Here are some key characteristics we've identified that make up a great group leadership team member:

- Dedicated
- Empowers Everyone
- Organized
- Passionate

How to recruit members as group leaders?

- Target specific members who would be great leaders (instead of posting a general announcement)
- Ask members to help with specific tasks or events (instead of asking for general help)
- Recognize the great work current leaders are doing to inspire other members to step up and participate

Roles on a group's leadership team

In addition to the primary organizer, there are three roles on a group's leadership team: co-organizers, assistant organizers, and event organizers. Each role has different levels of access to a group's organizer tools:

Leadership Team Permissions
